

These dragon heads have a top and two sides, plus decorative ear flaps.

Supplies:

- 8.5x11 cardstock
- party hats
- scissors, hole punch & tape
- google eyes, glitter glue & white out

Note: construction paper is not sturdy enough.

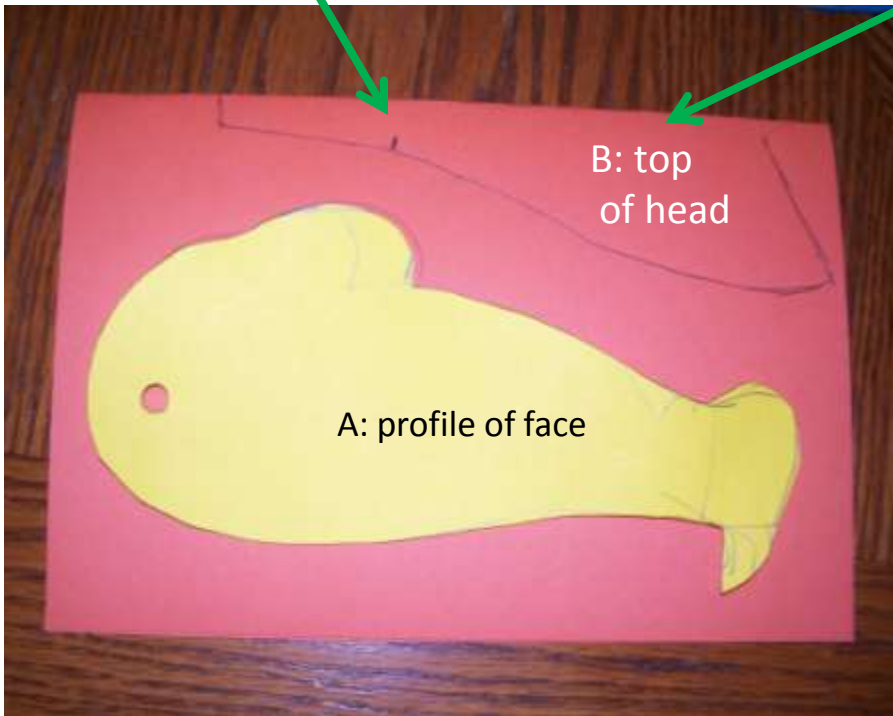

Super Cute Dragon Hat
Design by C. Cudaback
Cynthia.cudaback@gmail.com

In the cutting diagram below, note that the upper part of the dragon's snout, in profile (A), has a similar curve to the wedge that will become the top of his head (B). For right handed people, it is easier to cut out the dragon right-facing.

This mark goes where the nostril turns up

Fold in paper

Fold one piece of cardstock in half, crosswise.

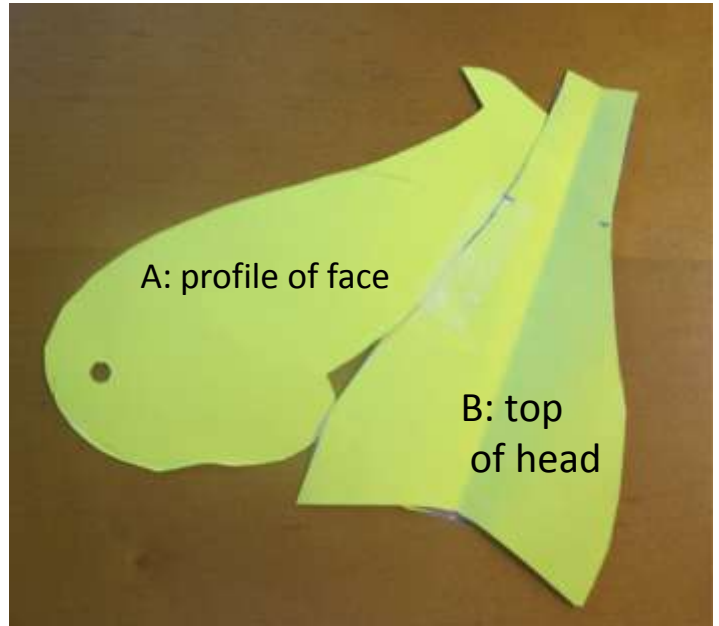

Cut one of piece B on fold.
Cut two of piece A.

The teeth are colored with whiteout, and the google eyes are $\frac{1}{2}$ " diameter. Nostrils and decorations are glitter glue.

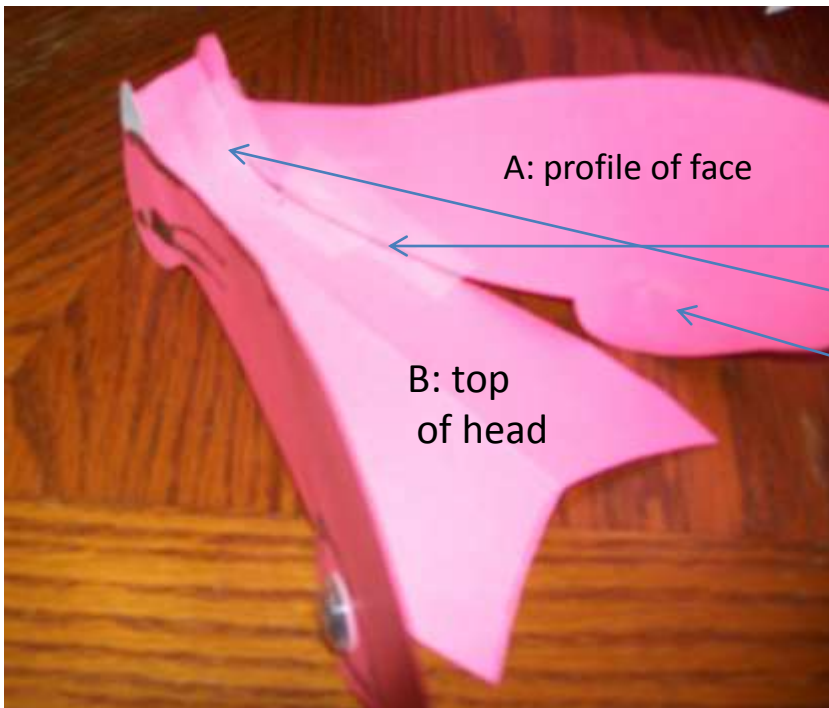

Taping the head is a little tricky, but you can do the first part with the pieces lying flat.

The inside of what will be the right side of the face is shown.

1. Line up the mark on the B with the spot on A where the nostril turns upward. Tape A to B from the nostril back an inch or so.

Taping order

1. Behind nostril
2. Front of snout
3. Below eye

2. Bend the front part of B downward so that it becomes the front of the snout, and tape in place.
3. Extend the wide part of B along the line defined by the top of the snout A. The edge of B gets taped to A just below the bulge of the eye

Attach the dragon head to a party hat just in front of the holes for the chinstrap. Metal fasteners add strength.

Tape the center of piece B to the hat for stability.

Add ear flaps last for style.